Batch-2019-21

The story of my corporate journey started with a very hard phase of the pandemic, but the Jaipuria Institute of Management had a huge role in kickstarting my voyage into the white-collar world, which I can never deny. I started my journey with the profile of Account Receivables in a Hyderabad-based company, IKS Health, under the US healthcare sector. I got this opportunity from the college during the days of the pandemic when looking out for a job and securing it was one of the most dreadful and challenging parts of the economy, given the recession that followed after the lockdown. The pedagogy followed in Jaipuria, to create a simulation on how the corporate culture works, by our various faculty, acted as a boon and helped me in dealing with various everyday scenarios that I faced in my job. In comparison with other colleagues, I was able to act more proactively, given the corporate exposure I received in my college days, and I got rewarded for performing consistently well in rewards and recognition ceremonies. This experience also helped me look out for better opportunities outside of my organization so that I could facilitate the growth in my career. The placement cell of the college trained us, ensuring we could grab opportunities, which helped me secure my placement at Deloitte. It's been almost 2 years since my graduation, and I'm still thankful for all the exposure that I got from Jaipuria.

STUDENT SUCCESS STORIES

Securing Offers from PwC & S&P Global: A Milestone Achieved

Receiving placement offers from PwC and S&P Global, two globally renowned firms, marks a significant milestone in my journey. This achievement is a result of relentless dedication, continuous learning, and the unwavering support of my mentors, faculty, and peers.

My journey began with a deep interest in finance, investment analysis, and risk assessment, which I cultivated through rigorous coursework, industry projects, and internships. As a Post Graduate Diploma in Management (PGDM) student specializing in Finance, I took every opportunity to enhance my expertise. My internship at Axis Bank in the Commercial Banking Group (CBG) Department provided hands-on exposure to credit analysis, SME lending, and working capital finance, solidifying my practical understanding of the financial sector.

Beyond academics, I engaged in multiple research and valuation projects, including an in-depth project in Financial Derivatives on the use of different trading strategies for different market conditions and the valuation of Deepak Nitrite using the DCF method. These experiences honed my analytical thinking and prepared me for the challenges of competitive placements.

When PwC and S&P Global presented their opportunities, I knew the competition would be tough. Their recruitment processes were meticulous and challenging, involving aptitude tests, technical rounds, and behavioral interviews. However, I remained focused—revising key financial concepts, practicing case studies, and preparing for situational problem-solving.

A key learning from this journey was the importance of self-belief and adaptability. There were moments of uncertainty, but my mentors and peers constantly encouraged me to trust my skills and stay persistent. Each stage of the selection process strengthened my confidence, allowing me to present myself as a capable and well-prepared candidate.

I am deeply grateful to my faculty, placement team, and friends who played an integral role in my success. To aspiring juniors, my advice is simple: stay committed to your goals, refine your technical and analytical skills, and actively engage in real-world projects. Placements are not just about knowledge; they are about confidence, problem-solving, and demonstrating your ability to add value.

As I step into this exciting new chapter with PwC and S&P Global, I carry with me the lessons of perseverance, learning, and the belief that hard work always pays off.
